Assessment Summary

Based on your Express Entry profile, we've received the results of your provincial nominee assessments for British Columbia and Nova Scotia.

It's essential to note that these scores are not an overall ranking. The assessments suggest the following:

For British Columbia, with a score of 60, you have met the minimum eligibility requirements. However, this score may indicate that your qualifications and experience may not be considered highly competitive.

For Nova Scotia, with a score of 80, you have exceeded the minimum eligibility requirements. This score suggests you have a competitive profile and may be considered for an invitation to apply (ITA).

To take the next steps, we recommend exploring further the details of both provincial nominee programs. We suggest reviewing the required qualifications, work experience, and skill sets highlighted in both the British Columbia and Nova Scotia assessment reports to better understand the requirements for a potential nomination.

Once you have a clearer understanding of these requirements, you may consider amending your profile to meet the provincial nominee programs' criteria more closely. You can then submit an application to the relevant provincial nominee program.
